

Hungry Howie's gets a visit from local 3-year-olds

By John Rasche

Hillsdale Daily News

February 10, 2012

Ashley Russell Photo

A group of students from Head Start tour Hungry Howie's and prepare their own pizza lunches.

Hillsdale, Mich – A group of 3-year-olds made their own pizzas at Hungry Howie's in Hillsdale on Tuesday morning. Ashley Russell, a manager at the pizza parlor scheduled a field trip for her son's class from Head Start of the Community Action Agency to visit the workplace and learn how to make pizzas step-by-step. The children were allowed to sauce, cheese and place toppings on their own mini-pizzas.

"They think it is amazing doing 'grown up' work," Russell said. "I think it's a really good experience for the kids." Approximately 14 students were given the grand tour of Hungry Howie's and even allowed to visit the large cooler in the back. "They thought it was just the coolest thing, like it was a big fridge," she said.