Physician to speak on health insurance

Dr. Jonathon Ross, past president of Physicians for a National Health Program (PNHP), will speak on that topic from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Monday, July 17, at the Weber Retreat and Conference Center.

During his talk, "Understanding Universal Single Payer Health Care," Ross will describe the single-payer form of health insurance and compare it to other options.

As a practitioner of general internal medicine, Ross is an associate clinical professor of internal medicine at the University of Toledo. A 1975 graduate of Cornell University, he graduated from the Medical College of Ohio at Toledo and has a master's degree in health policy and administration from the School of Public Health at the University of Michigan.

The program is free and open to the public. Weber Retreat Center is toward the back of the Adrian Dominican Sisters' motherhouse at 1257 E. Siena Heights Drive. For more information call 517-266-4000.

DEAR ABBY

Man answers wife's hurt feelings with angry shouts

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for two years and my husband has three grown children. He was recently planning a getaway with the youngest and included me in the plans. I didn't want to interfere and suggested his child might want to spend some one-on-one time with him. I later learned that not only were his other kids going, but their spouses were as well. Everyone was included but me. I felt very hurt to be excluded.

When I shared with him how I felt, his response was that he couldn't control his kids, but I feel he could have controlled his response. To exclude me was deliberate. When I told him how hurt I was, he got less than an inch from my face and started screaming about MY kids (who love him like a father). It scared me because he was in my face. I have never had a man scream in my face like that before. I don't know what to do. I was truly terrified.

— LOST IN THE EAST

DEAR LOST: Your husband may have reacted the way he did out of guilt. If you haven't already, tell him that no one has ever spoken to you the way he did and that it terrified you. Tell him that when someone acts that way, the natural conclusion of the person being bullied (which is what he was doing) is to fear the verbal attack will escalate to physical violence.

JEANNE PHILLIPS

If he can't explain calmly why he overreacted when you said you were hurt, then the two of you could use some sessions with a marriage counselor. If he refuses to go, go without him. He was less than honest in not disclosing beforehand that everyone but you would be vacationing together. During some of your counseling sessions, consider discussing healthy ways to disagree and the dynamics of "vacations with the kids" — both his and yours — in the future.

DEAR ABBY: Years before my dad passed away, he started keeping a notebook he called "Jack's Doomsday Book." In it he listed account numbers and balances, names of banks, passwords, locations of documents and other detailed instructions on how to take over his responsibilities if he was incapacitated. He always told Mom and me that if something happened, to find that notebook in which everything was written down.

Mom died first, so when Dad became ill years later, he made sure I had the notebook. I can't tell you how much easier it made things. I didn't have to go searching through paperwork to figure out what was what. I knew the banks I had to go to and what to bring. It was all there, down to the changes he had made after Mom passed. Even our financial adviser was impressed at how easy Dad made everything for us. Everyone should have a doomsday book. — JACK'S GIRL IN LOUISIANA

DEAR JACK'S GIRL: I couldn't agree more. I admire your father's pragmatism. Too many adults fail to plan ahead for this kind of inevitability, which causes additional problems for survivors at a time when they are trying to cope with their grief. Readers, if you haven't already done something similar, you should consider it.

HOUSING ASSISTANCE

CAA awarded HUD grant

By Daily Telegram staff

JACKSON — The Community Action Agency (CAA) has been awarded a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant in the amount of $31,025 to support housing counseling activities in Jackson, Lenawee and Hillsdale counties.

The funds are to assist families and individuals with their housing needs and prevent future foreclosures, according to a news release. Comprehensive housing counseling helps address a range of needs, including Homebuyer Education classes. Homebuyer Education helps potential homebuyers evaluate readiness for home purchase, understand the homebuying process, as well as learn more about finance and down payment options available.

The grant also will help individuals in need of financial management education, budgeting and credit counseling as well as homeowners facing foreclosure.

During the 2015-16 year, more than 267 individuals attended the homebuyer education classes, 86 individuals were helped with foreclosure prevention services, 160 individuals attended financial literacy classes and 75 individuals received one-on-one financial counseling at CAA.

Local residents with housing or other financial needs may contact the Lenawee office of the Community Action Agency at 400 W. South St., Adrian; call 517-263-7861 or visit caajlh.org.
